

PARLIAMENT of FINLAND
2016

Parliament convened for its first 2016 plenary session on Monday, 2 February in the Sibelius Academy, where it moved to in spring 2015 due to the renovation of Parliament house. Parliament re-elected Maria Lohela (Finns Party) as Speaker, Mauri Pekkarinen (Centre Party) as First Deputy Speaker and Paula Risikko (National Coalition Party) as Second Deputy Speaker. The opening ceremonies of the parliamentary session took place at Finlandia Hall on 3 February.

During the 2016 parliamentary session, a number of changes took place in the composition of Parliament and the speakers, as well as in the number of seats held by different parliamentary groups. MP Arto Satonen (National Coalition Party) was elected to replace Risikko as deputy speaker on 23 June, after Risikko was appointed as Minister of the Interior.

On 22 June, Parliament granted MP Carl Haglund (Swedish People's Party) release from the office of Member of Parliament as of 30 July, when he moved to the business world. Haglund was replaced by Veronica Rehn-Kivi from the Uusimaa electoral district. She assumed her post on 9 August.

The Minister of Social Affairs and Health changed on 25 August, as Hanna Mäntylä (Finns Party) left her duties for family reasons. The President of the Republic appointed MP Pirkko Mattila (Finns Party) as the new Minister of Social Affairs and Health.

On 3 December, MP Olli Rehn (Centre Party) was released from the office of Member of Parliament as of 1 February 2017, following his appointment as board member of the Bank of Finland. MP Mika Lintilä was appointed to replace Rehn as Minister of Economic Affairs on 29 December.

The Members of Parliament appointed as ministers will continue in their roles as MPs.

MP Maria Tolppanen (Finns Party) left her party's parliamentary group and joined that of the Social Democratic Party on 22 June. Following Tolppanen's move, the Finns Party parliamentary group and the National Coalition Party parliamentary group both came to have 37 MPs.

At the end of the year, Parliament had 84 female Members of Parliament. Measured by the number of parliamentary seats, Finland enjoys better equality than most other countries. However, it is difficult to make straightforward comparisons due to differences in the electoral systems of countries and the adoption of, for example, quotas for women.

The year in politics was coloured by the refugee and migrant crisis in Europe and the United Kingdom's vote in June to leave the European Union. The latter, commonly known as Brexit, showed in Parliament's EU activities, but did not yet call for a concrete stand on issues.

However, several changes were made to the immigration policy. Among other things, Parliament tightened the criteria for family reunification and amended the Aliens Act to exclude humanitarian protection as grounds for the granting of residence permits.

In response to the tense international security environment, Parliament amended the Conscription Act, enabling reservists to be assigned to reservist training at once if required to raise the country's defence preparedness.

In the field of human rights, Finland made a big advance in May by ratifying the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. The ratification was made possible, among other things, by Parliament passing an amendment to the Act on Special Care for the Mentally Handicapped, strengthening the right of self-determination of people with disabilities. Parliament approved the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in 2015.

In domestic politics, the greatest attention focused on the social welfare and health care reform, as well as the efforts made to improve competitiveness and enhance labour market activities. At the close of the 2016 parliamentary session, the acts regarding the social welfare and health care reform were still under preparation in Government, but in December, as part of the overall package, Parliament made a decision on the hospitals providing extensive emergency care in the future.

In connection with the Competitiveness Pact, employees' unemployment contributions and earnings-related pension contributions were raised, the conditions for adult education subsidies were tightened and taxation was eased slightly.

To balance central government finances, Parliament scaled back the duration of earnings-related unemployment benefits to 400 days, and cut the amount of child benefits, national pensions, guarantee pensions, disability benefits and basic unemployment allowance.

Parliament also passed a bill on a universal basic income experiment. The goal of the experiment is to determine whether a universal basic income can promote employment and help reform the social security system. Improvements made to the tax credit for domestic expenses also aim to boost employment.

During the 2016 parliamentary session, Parliament concluded the consideration of 268 government proposals.

Parliament received four citizens' initiatives, which concerned the tying of employment pensions to the index of wage and salary earnings, the legal position of children of female same-sex couples, the revocation of the gender-neutral marriage act, and the organisation of a referendum on Finland's membership in the eurozone. As for the initiative on leaving the eurozone, the Constitutional Law Committee decided against passing a report on the proposal, thus preventing the initiative from proceeding to a plenary session. The other initiatives were under consideration at the close of the parliamentary session.

In 2016, the committees held 18 open hearings, all of which were broadcast live online. Two publication and seminar events of the Committee for the Future, as well as all the plenary sessions were also broadcast online. The Finnish Broadcasting Company, Yle, televises the government's question hours and the main plenary session discussions.

The duties of a Member of Parliament are international

In Parliament's international cooperation, the Speakers and Members of Parliament promote matters that are important to Finland's foreign policy, such as democracy, rule of law, human rights, regional transboundary cooperation, Arctic cooperation and transatlantic relations. Members of Parliament participate in interparliamentary organisations, and parliaments engage in active bilateral exchange. In 2016, Parliament hosted the speakers of Sweden, China and Kazakhstan, among others.

The following nine delegations participate in the work of multilateral international organisations:

- Finnish Delegation to the Nordic Council
- Finnish Delegation to the Council of Europe
- Finnish Delegation to the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly
- Finnish Delegation to the Conference of Parliamentarians of the Arctic Region
- Finnish Delegation to the Baltic Sea Parliamentary Conference
- Finnish Group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union
- Finnish Delegation to the Asia-Europe Parliamentary Partnership Meeting
- Finnish Delegation to the NATO Parliamentary Assembly
- Finnish Delegation to the Euro-Mediterranean Parliamentary Assembly

The Parliament of Finland has a total of 103 seats in these organisations.

MP Ilkka Kanerva's (National Coalition Party) two-year term as the President of the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly ended in summer 2016. In the autumn, he was appointed Special Representative on Mediation of the organisation. Maria Guzenina (Social Democratic Party), chair of the Finnish Delegation to the Council of Europe, served as co-rapporteur of the 2016 Parliamentary Assembly.

Celebrating women's suffrage

The position of women and equality were reflected in Parliament's activities in many ways. On 1 June, Parliament marked the 110th anniversary of universal and equal suffrage with a special plenary session. The session took the form of a topical debate on the role of equality in promoting social stability and progress.

In conjunction with approving the 2017 Budget, Parliament decided to establish an innovation award for women, focused on technology and the economy. Worth €110,000, the award will be granted in 2017, 2018 and 2019.

The renovation of Parliament's properties, launched in 2007, is now in the final leg. The renovation has targeted the MP's offices on both sides of Parliament House, the administration buildings completed in 1952 and 1978 behind Parliament House, as well as the underground facilities designed for states of emergency. The renovation of Parliament House will be completed in autumn 2017.

Youth Parliament convened for the tenth time

Arranged every two years, the Youth Parliament took place on 15 April. The plenary session took the traditional form of a question hour, with ministers answering questions that pupils had prepared at their parliament clubs at school. The topics discussed included climate change, Finnish security policy, penalties for sexual crimes, the refugee crisis and economic sanctions against Russia. A total of 199 student representatives from 109 upper comprehensive schools all around Finland attended the session. The Youth Parliament was organised for the tenth time.

Parliament also prepared for the 100th anniversary of Finland's independence and launched its series of events with MP visits to schools. During the anniversary year, Parliament will arrange around 60
